HONGKONG, JUNE 26TH, 1880.

THE news of the eviction of the Chinese from. Mott Street, New York, was hailed with undisguised delight in California. For some time past the Press of California have been prophesying a revulsion of feeling in the Eastern States against the Chinese, and they now regard the action of the house owners in New York as the first decided proof of the truth of their prognostications. The San Francisco Post, referring to the subject, says: -"The action of the property-owners of Mott Street, New York, in evicting the Chinese colony which had established itself there directs public attention to the rapid growth | the defendants. of the Chinese element in the East. At least a thousand Chinamen had managed to get into tenements in the street in question, and their rapidly increasing numbers became a nuisance, which the members of a church in that thoroughfare resented.
